COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT STAFF ENROLLED IN SHELTON STATE WELLNESS PROGRAM

Shelton State Community College and the Tuscaloosa County Sheriff's department have recently entered into a unique and cooperative arrangement that will help the 65 deputies from the Sheriff's office achieve a new and better lifestyle.

These employees are now enrolled in a four-week, comprehensive wellness program offered through Shelton State Community College. Under the direction of Dr. Milady Khoury-Murphy, director of Shelton's Wellness Center, a four-hour weekly program has been designed to meet the needs of the department and is being offered through February so that all members of the Sheriff's department can participate.

The program evolved when Sheriff Sexton asked that a comprehensive wellness program for his personnel be developed in order to educate them on how proper nutrition can assist in weight loss, prevention of heart disease and help them increase their stamina and reduce job stress.

Sheriff Sexton was introduced to the total wellness concept while attending the F.B.I. National Academy. The Sheriff's department modeled their program after the Meridian Police Department's program which has been in effect for approximately 18 months.

According to Sheriff Sexton, the deputies have 18 months in which to comply with published guidelines regarding weight in relation to height. The goal of the new total wellness program is to ensure that officers retire healthy from the agency, reduce skeletal-muscular injuries by increasing flexibility, reduce the amount of sick time and Workman's Compensation claims, and reduce medical insurance claims.

Each week the program consists of a two part seminar. The first two hours focus on nutrition for weight loss, prevention of heart disease and certain cancers, and the lowering of Low Density Lipoproteins and Triglycerides. The next two hours focus on strengthening and conditioning techniques and guidelines. As part of the program, a special unit designed to prevent back injuries and increase total body flexibility has been included.

According to Arthur Howington, dean of academic services for the college, the officers in the program seem pleased so far with the course. "Milady Khoury-Murphy is an expert in the field of wellness. If they follow her directions, they will be the most fit department in the country. Criminals won't get away from them in the fourth quarter," Howington said.

Joining Khoury-Murphy as guest lecturers for the class are Dr. S. B. Sundar, who will discuss stress and gastro intestinal disorders, and Donna Robertson, certified pedorthist, who will talk about how to prevent athletic injuries.

The program is being held in the Beatrice H. Morrison Industrial Center on Shelton's Fifteenth Street Campus and is being offered through the college's program for business and industry.
